

b:

Case studies and client stories

Why we need compelling stories

Collecting and showcasing the voice of the customer and their successes strengthens our company's credibility, improves our marketing efficacy, demonstrates our value, mitigates customer and prospect hesitations, and inspires them to take action.

SUCCESS STORY

Unilever

Unilever Sets the Bar for CGC Marketing Success

If you are looking for guidance on how to get more business value from consumer-generated content (CGC), Unilever sets the best-in-class bar. With more than 400 brands used in homes around the globe, Unilever is one of the largest consumer products companies in the world — and also one of the most successful at using CGC to promote brands.

The secret to Unilever's success? The company embodies the traits of a successful CGC marketer — traits that Bazaarvoice has identified while helping companies roll out and run CGC programs.

Here is how Unilever exemplifies the five traits that Bazaarvoice has identified over many years of helping companies roll out and run CGC programs.

1. FOCUSING ON THE FUNDAMENTALS

Collecting as much CGC as possible is a simple but profound step for making the most of CGC. Unilever relies on Bazaarvoice to collect CGC in the form of customer reviews — the most powerful form of CGC.

"Reviews instill a lot of trust among consumers and give them the ability to make a purchase," according to Jenna Spivak Evans, Insights and Capabilities Manager at Unilever. "And we've seen that the correlation between review volume and number of orders is strong."

CGC is undeniably powerful when it comes to driving conversions from shoppers. As Evans points out, "Research from Forrester shows that 80% of shoppers are more likely to make a purchase after a positive review."

bazaarvoice: © Bazaarvoice, 2018

AT A GLANCE

Challenge
Maximize the business value derived from CGC marketing.

Solution
Develop the five traits of successful CGC marketers.

Customer stories are considered the most effective format for driving adoption and sales, according to a survey of 600 B2B marketing professionals by The LinkedIn Technology Marketing Group.

Keys to high-impact stories

Specific and relevant enough for different types of customers based on industry, size, persona, goal, challenge, and other criteria.

Outcome-focused and demonstrates measurable success and ROI.

Easy to access, search, and navigate, SEO-friendly, and discoverable in the right channel at the right time.

Heavily leverages the customer voice with an emphasis on the end customer experience, not just the product.

Diverse types and formats of content that fit a variety of consumption preferences.

Customer story deep dive

AT A GLANCE

Challenge

Become a consumer-centric organization and continue delivering products people love.

Solution

Utilize user-generated content to listen to and engage with consumers.

Benefits

Higher customer satisfaction, increased engagement, and more robust insights for data-driven decision making.

Compelling Storytelling:
A quick and useful summary section

Nestlé Canada leverages user-generated content to gather insights, improve products, and interact with loyal customers.

As a subsidiary of the world's largest food and beverage company, Nestlé Canada is on a mission to amplify consumer voices to improve product offerings and drive growth. Nestlé's products span a variety of items consumers use every day — from coffee and candy to pet care, nutrition, beverages, and more. With more than 2,000 well-known brands, including KitKat, Nescafé, Häagen-Dazs, Lean Cuisine, Delissio, and Purina, Nestlé has a presence in households around the world.

The company delivers on their mission by using Bazaarvoice solutions to drive consumer-first thinking across their marketing department, to harness data and insights to inform business decisions, and to deliver an exceptional shopping experience for consumers throughout the customer journey.

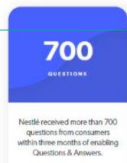

UGC supports consumer-first thinking

For Nestlé, becoming a consumer-centric organization is essential to growth. The company believes this requires paying close attention to feedback, both positive and negative. Listening to what consumers are saying and building engagement with shoppers is a core part of Nestlé's business.

By collecting and leveraging UGC, Nestlé Canada allows customers to directly inform brand strategy. Customer reviews and questions provide the Nestlé team with an in-depth look into the minds of their customers, and displaying the authentic content from real shoppers on product pages helps other consumers make informed purchase decisions. UGC puts consumers front and center, which builds trust in Nestlé brands.

While the Customer Experience (CX) team leads the UGC program, it shares the learnings and data from the program across the broader marketing organization, helping their entire business to better understand how customers perceive their products.

"Consumers do the talking for us. They speak, and we listen and take action. We're fortunate that our leadership really understands the value of a platform for consumers to share their opinions and voices," said Beech.

ABOUT THE COMPANY

Outcome Focused

Outcome Focused:
Visual highlight of key results
(e.g. review volume)

Customer-Centric:
Strong emphasis on the client's consumer-focused mission

Customer-Centric:
Using technology to transform the process and deliver CX

“Consumers do the talking for us. They speak, and we listen and take action.”

Lee Beech
Director of Customer Experience, Nestlé Canada

Customer-Centric:
Visually impactful customer quote

CONSUMER SENTIMENT >

238

Products with highlights and lowlights

Products with both positive and negative themes mentioned in review text.

177

Products with notable quotes for marketing

Products with notable quotes from reviews that mention common themes.

231

Products with consumer keywords

Products with common keywords that customers are using in reviews.

Dynamic Visual Identity:
Graphics/photos used in the PDF version

"The review data mirrors some of the things that we're seeing in the consumer service data, but it also allows us to see other themes that we may not detect through some of the phone conversations with consumers," said Kristina Rapljenovic, Website Manager at Nestlé Canada.

STAYING CUSTOMER-CENTRIC ALSO REQUIRES ENGAGEMENT

Listening to customers is only one piece of the puzzle — user-generated content is also meant to facilitate two-way conversation.

Nestlé spends time each day responding to customer reviews and answering questions. In fact, the team noticed that many of the neutral reviews (which many brands often don't prioritize in their response strategy) included questions about the products. Nestlé did not initially respond to these reviews, as they were not fed into the team's process flow. After enabling Bazaarvoice Questions & Answers, Nestlé received more than 700 questions from consumers within three months.

"When you think about the impact, that's 700 fewer calls or emails coming through to our customer service team. It's time and money saved, so the impact is significant," said Rapljenovic.

One of the ways Nestlé succeeds with engagement is through the Bazaarvoice Salesforce Connector, which allows the customer engagement team to respond to consumer questions, reviews, and other inquiries within one tool.

"The review data mirrors some of the things that we're seeing in the consumer service data, but it also allows us to see other themes that we may not detect through some of the phone conversations with consumers"

Kristina Rapljenovic
Website Manager,
Nestlé Canada

Customer-Centric:
Quotes from multiple stakeholders

Outcome Focused:
Driving EX and business outcomes
(e.g. productivity, cost efficiency)

Customer story deep dive

BURT'S BEES®

HEALTH & BEAUTY

Burt's Bees

Burt's Bees leverages consumer content to drive retail channel sales, gather insights, and launch new products with immediate success.

🕒 Ratings & Reviews 📧 Sampling

Outcome Focused:
Successful product launches and increased sales

AT A GLANCE

Challenge

Address growing consumer demands for all-natural products by launching the company's first cosmetics line of products.

Solution

Leverage consumer content and sampling as a critical element of the marketing strategy.

Benefits

High review volume at time of launch, supporting sales in the retail channel and in gathering early product feedback.

Diverse Content:
Addressing the trend of natural products

Sampling supports new category success for Burt's Bees

In today's crowded marketplace, consumers are bombarded with marketing messages from all sides. It's harder than ever for a brand to stand out, especially in a new product category. Consumers have access to an unprecedented amount of choice for what to buy—and they expect to find lots of information about products to help them decide.

Across categories, shoppers research products before making purchases, and in today's "right here, right now" economy, they do so faster than ever before, both in the store aisle and online. One key information source they trust: the opinions of people like them.

Burt's Bees has long recognized the importance of authentic consumer-generated content, using it as a critical component of its marketing strategy since partnering with Bazaarvoice in 2009. Naturally, when they planned to break into a new product category, consumer content was a critical element of their strategy.

300
REVIEWS

Within just two weeks, 94% of those who received a sample submitted a review, resulting in more than 300 reviews.

Diverse Content:
Common challenges in a product launch

Within just two weeks, 94% of those who received a sample submitted a review, resulting in more than 300 reviews (37.41 reviews per product) with a 4.48 average star rating.

Bazaarvoice Sampling proved cost-effective and easy to use, as well.

"We had an issue where our in-house sampling program wasn't as effective as we might have liked. It was time-consuming and very costly," said Steele. "Bazaarvoice's solution addressed all the issues we had with our own and at a much lower cost."

HARVESTING INSIGHTS TO IMPROVE THE SITE EXPERIENCE

Burt's Bees used the CGC they collected to surface opportunities for improvement on their own website.

"This was the first time burtbees.com would play a huge part in the launch period. Gathering learnings and understanding our customers and their shopping behaviors based on early feedback helped inform changes to our site that made it easier for cosmetics customers to find what they were looking for," said Steele.

For example, Burt's Bees identified the need to add a foundation shade finder tool, making it easier for customers to pick the right product based on skin tone

Customer-Centric:
Strong use of customer voice and testimonials

bazaarvoice® © Bazaarvoice, 2018

The company also revamped product description pages, adding larger product images and moving star ratings higher up the page to increase visibility of CGC.

"In the past, we were not as shopper-focused. We knew we needed to better the shopper experience and that stars were important to customers," said Steele. "We needed to put stars right in front of their faces because they need to know what others are saying right away, and from there, each shopper could dive into specific reviews."

Within six months, cosmetics accounted for 21% of all sales on the brand's site. Shoppers who engaged with reviews showed a 16% incremental conversion lift and a 20% increase in revenue per visitor. Burt's Bees cosmetic buyers are also among the most valuable customers, as return cosmetic shoppers represent the site's highest average order value.

BUILDING ON THE EARLY SUCCESS

CGC served as a critical tool in establishing Burt's Bees as a major cosmetics brand, and the company plans to grow its position in the category by releasing more makeup products.

"We have a partner in Bazaarvoice that we'll continue to turn to as we start selling even more products our customers will love," said Steele.

16%

INCREMENTAL
CONVERSION LIFT

Outcome Focused:
Visually impactful quantified ROI

20%

INCREASE IN REVENUE PER VISITOR

Compelling Storytelling:
Next steps with Bazaarvoice

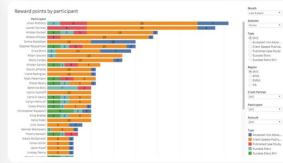

Ways to source stories

- Customer health scores
- CSAT, NPS
- Sales contracts
- Renewals
- Nominations/submissions from internal teams
- Nominations/submissions from customers
- Internal incentive program
- Enablement
- Post-event surveys
- Existing advocates and/or previous “participants”
- Word-of-mouth
- 3rd party review sites

Item	Point Value
Client accepted into reference program	1
Internal story submission	1
Winning story	3
Client speaks publically (events, press/media)	3
Public case study	5

Stories	Prize
Top 6 Story Winners	$300 each
5 SaaS Stories; 1 Ads Story

Quarterly Awards (point-based)	Prize
1st Place	$500
2nd Place	$500
3rd Place	$500

Bazaarvoice Case Study Introduction

This benefits:

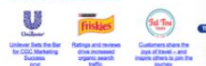

- Highlight your success
 - Showcase your company's thought leadership, innovation and focus on the customer voice
- Opportunity to build your personal brand
 - Often leads to additional publicity (press releases, published articles, etc.)
 - Example: Recent SaaS case study led to the client featured in an AdAge article
 - Example: Recent SaaS case study led to the client featured in a Forbes article

Process:

A low-level effort with everything approved

1. "Discovery" conversation to capture the "story" in the client's own words and to gather assets.
2. Bazaarvoice creates initial draft of copy and sends to client for approval.
3. Upon completing rounds of edits and gathering any imagery, client-ear converted to a graphics/PDF format.
4. Upon final client approval, the case study is posted on the Bazaarvoice webpage and a PDF.
5. Optional: Bazaarvoice will pursue additional publicity opportunities if interested.

Recent case studies include:

It's an opportunity to demonstrate your company's position as an innovator and leader in the space, showcase success, build your personal brand, and generate free publicity.

Building a centralized, easy-to-navigate content library

- Powered by Airtable
- Embedded in Confluence and dynamically updated
- Easy to find relevant content – can be filtered, sorted, exported, tagged and searched
- Displayed via table or gallery

The screenshot displays a centralized content library interface with a grid of 12 content cards. Each card represents a different brand and includes the following information:

- Image: A representative image of the brand's product or service.
- Title: A brief description of the content.
- Summary: A short paragraph summarizing the content.
- Content type: A dropdown menu showing the type of content (e.g., Case study).
- Industry: A dropdown menu showing the industry (e.g., Health / Beauty).
- Vertical: A dropdown menu showing the vertical (e.g., Retail).
- Brand: A dropdown menu showing the brand (e.g., Burt's Bees).
- Co. size: A dropdown menu showing the company size (e.g., 200-500).
- Product: A dropdown menu showing the product (e.g., R&D).
- Tags: A set of tags (e.g., Sampling, Insights, Conversion).
- Link: A URL linking to the content (e.g., https://www.bazaarvoice.com/success-stories/burts-bees/).
- Region: A dropdown menu showing the region (e.g., NA).

The interface also includes a search bar at the top right and a filter button at the bottom right.

Questions?